Roberts-Heyes Wedding Solemnized on Lawn at Groom's Home.

A quiet, but unique, wedding occurred at Cozybrook farm, Williamstown, the home of Rev. and Mrs. William N. Roberts, Sunday, June 9, at high noon, when their youngest son, William Neal, was united in marriage with Miss Vera Heyes, the youngest daughter of Mr. Anne Heyes of Jamaica Plain, Mass. The ceremony was performed by the father of the groom, under the maples, amid the growing ferns, the couple standing on a thick carpet of maidenhair ferns, with the three allied national flags as a background.

The bride was born under the union jack, coming to this country five years ago.

Rain prevented the out-of-door luncheon which had been prepared.

The couple left on the midnight train for New London, Conn., where the groom, who is a electrician, third class, radio, U. S. navy, is taking an advanced course in radio work. He expects to be sent across soon. The best wishes of their many friends go with them.

The burial service was at 11 a. m. on Saturday, the 8th and was brief, consisting of reading of scripture and prayer by the pastor of the church, Rev. John Irons. The bearers were Charles M. Seaver, Henry Poole, Walter B. Simons and George E. Wilber. The burial was in the lot of her father, L. Mosely Martin. Relatives present were a brother, Daniel B. Martin of Pullman, Ill., two daughters, Edith (Mrs. H. H. Bean), formerly of Randolph and now of Cornish, N. H., with her

One of the Williamstown boys now at Camp Devens, Mass., writes to his mother that "those stockings sent by the Red Cross are just the thing to wear with the heavy shoes furnished by the government."

Miss Helen Kimball of Alstead, N. H., is in town with Miss Millie J. Drury and Mrs. Ida Whitcomb.

Miss Doris Covell, a student at Brigham academy, Bakersfield, is the guest for a few days of her cousin, Mrs. Harry M. Lassell.

Children's day was observed at both the Methodist and Congregational churches yesterday with appropriate exercises.
